BAKER CREEK STATE PARK

Mountain Bike Trail 🚴‍♂️

Trail at a Glance - ⛰️ 🚴‍♂️
LENGTH: Up to 10 miles of connecting loops
DIFFICULTY: Moderate
TRAILHEAD: 33.88034, -82.36470
SURFACE: Natural, rugged in places, tricky to follow
FEES: State park entrance fee
PETS PERMITTED: Yes
RESTROOMS: Yes, at the park visitor center

The light reflecting off a fleck of mica or a glint of pyrite in the bed of Baker Creek might catch your attention as you pedal past on the Mountain Bike Trail. Steep and leafy, the yellow-blazed trail beckons you downhill and deeper into the forested hills surrounding the creek, which makes its final splash into the placid waters of Lake Thurmond. As Baker Creek flows through the hilly landscape, it carries stories with it of days past when these hills were alive with men prospecting with picks and shovels.

Wild Mint Trail 🌿

This loop trail begins at a high point where puffy deer moss sits in clusters on a base of pine straw amid a forest of pines and cedars. It is a quiet place, the swoop of the footpath curving down into a deciduous forest where a cove of Lake Russell is visible. Humidity nourishes the rampant growth of mosses and lichens on tree trunks, and the ooze of fungi from rotting logs. Yellow buckeye tosses its blooms in the breeze.
Mariners Nature Trail

Trail at a Glance - 🏞
LENGTH: 0.25 mile linear
DIFFICULTY: Moderate
TRAILHEAD: 34.10042, -82.61947 (park store), 34.10798, -82.62623 (campground)

Although the Mariners Nature Trail is a very short walk, it provides unique perspectives on Lake Russell and the forest sloping down to meet its waters. Now, the placid waters of the lake stretch nearly 27,000 acres across a once fertile valley. As the trail drops down the bluffs via a series of stairways to lake level, it affords scenic views across coves in the lake.

Enjoy the scenic view of this short hiking trail. Following the trail markers on the trees (white signs with black arrows), you will wander up and down through a thick forest of pines and hardwoods. Take a second to stop and enjoy the beautiful landscape and ravines formed over time by heavy rainfall. All through this area you may encounter a variety of birds, snakes, and other wildlife such as white tail deer, raccoon and fox squirrels. You may also be lucky enough to sight a bald eagle that nests in this area as you make your way back to the Gift Shop.

PETS PERMITTED: Yes
RESTROOMS: At the main visitor center at the Hickory Knob Lodge

The most gentle of the park’s trails, the 2.3-mile Beaver Run Trail provides an easy mountain bike ride for beginners. It’s the perfect setting for a jog, an early morning run, or a meditative walk, providing an immersion in the natural history of South Carolina’s Piedmont. As the trail dips down to the edge of Strom Thurmond Lake, it enters leafy stretches of floodplain forest, where red maple, sweetgum, and tupelo dominate.

Lakeview Trail

For mountain bikers, the 6.7-mile Lakeview Trail provides a balance of technical challenges with scenery unsurpassed on any of the region’s rides. This single track roller-coaster of a trail showcases scenic views above and along the shoreline of Strom Thurmond Lake in Hickory Knob Resort State Park. The tricky pedaling on this trail is well worth the experience. From promontories on the hillsides, there are panoramas of the massive lake below.

Turkey Ridge Trail

FEES: None
RESTROOMS: At the main visitor center at the Hickory Knob Lodge

The Turkey Ridge Trail at Hickory Knob Resort State Park is a short loop, which means when cyclists stay away, hikers can play. This walk in the woods offers steep ups and downs and switchbacks as it traverses the oak-hickory forest so common in the uplands of the South Carolina Piedmont. Splashing across a couple of streams is required to complete the loop. When the trail is dry and open for cycling, it provides a moderately technical challenge.
The Joe R. Adair Outdoor Education Center is a special place in Laurens County—complete with a restored 1800’s log cabin, man-made waterfall and bird sanctuary, hiking trails, a Native American village, butterfly garden, a handicap accessible garden and a state-of-the-art education building. The Adair Center is a wonderland of learning for children and adults alike.

The Lake Greenwood Nature Trail descends down to a cove along the lake’s edge before climbing up to the crest of a peninsula that juts out into Lake Greenwood. From this vantage point, the outline of the lake is visible in three directions. Fallen pines bear testament to the ravages of the Southern pine bark beetle through the region. But nature fills in the gaps, with young trees racing to create a new canopy.

The primary loop connects Fountain Inn, Owings, Gray Court, Laurens and Clinton; then returns to Fountain Inn via routes in northeastern Laurens County. Riders can begin at any point along the loop.

With the Little River flowing right through the middle of this historic town—established as the county seat in 1785—Laurens had a ready-made corridor for public enjoyment. With the help of landscape designer William Moss, a linear park emerged along this tributary of the Saluda River. This trail takes a meandering route through downtown Laurens, where it is a magnet for families. Each segment of the trail provides a different perspective of the river as it winds its way south.

The Savannah Valley Railroad Trail leads visitors past historic sites along a well-graded former rail line, making this the most comfortable bicycle route in the region. The trail is deeply shaded for most of its route and easy for hikers and fat-tire cyclists to follow. The history it touches makes the experience especially enjoyable. Watch for the ancient posts and mile markers all along the trail.
On the descent from the trailhead, it’s hard to envision the magic that Stevens Creek Heritage Preserve promises. But as the plunge downhill accelerates, there is a shift in the air. Literally. Cool breezes sweep down the waterways, which merge at a point where the loop begins, which is where fifteen rare and several endangered plant species call these cool sheltered spaces home. Access to the trail is possible from Hamilton Branch State Park.

Ferns dominate the growth along the streams.
A brisk ride down the shared trail leading to where all six trails splinter off into the woods becomes a gentle introduction to the terrain ahead, the route deeply shaded by deciduous forest. Little whoop-de-doos start right away, with a few rocks and roots for good measure. But no worries. The trail is well worn, so you can keep your eyes on what’s coming up.

At the top of a ridge on the Horn Creek Trail, the panorama of the Piedmont stretches out below. Its gentle folds and forests cover the footfalls of settlers long past. One of the region’s most scenic mountain bike trails, the Horn Creek Trail alternates between gentle hills and steep pitches. It’s worth the occasional dismount to take in the scenery of Piedmont azalea and mountain laurel that line the steep banks of Lick Fork Creek.
Framed by azaleas in bloom, Lick Fork Lake sparkles with beauty. Trapped between steep hills, it’s a place for families to picnic, anglers to cast a line, and Canadian geese to raise their young. Turtles find sunny spots to warm themselves. Hikers find Lick Fork Trail, a 1.8-mile loop, reminiscent of a walk at higher elevations. Along the footpath, wildflowers delight. Dwarf cinquefoil paints yellow dots across the forest floor, and rain lilies cluster along rocky ledges.

This multi-use loop trail is a favorite for mountain bikers to tackle some distance riding in the woods. The 655-acre Long Cane Scenic Area, containing both ancient trees like the state champion shagbark hickory and a significant canebrake thicket of giant cane, forms the center around which the 26.7-mile Long Cane Horse Trail revolves. Shorter loops of 16.7 miles and 15.1 miles are possible.

Home to an 800-foot summit, Parson’s Mountain Recreation Area offers a moderately difficult loop around Parson’s Mountain Lake. The four-mile loop includes woods overflowing with flora such as sparkleberry, redbud, wild ginger, and dogwood. Visitors wanting a tougher hike can take a branch of the trail passing by Civil War-era gold mines on the way to the summit.
Stevens Creek / Modoc Trail

Trail at a Glance -
LENGTH: 5.5 miles linear (11 mile round-trip)
DIFFICULTY: Difficult
TRAILHEAD: 33.72956, -82.18422
SURFACE: Natural, optimized for mountain biking
FEES: None
PETS PERMITTED: Yes

The Modoc Trail is one of the most technical mountain bike courses in the region, thanks to the rugged terrain along a stretch of Stevens Creek and the clever trail routing that makes use of the topography. Rock-hopping awaits at each creek crossing. With its combination of beauty and tough terrain, the Modoc Trail is one of the top highlights of this region for mountain bikers. Access to the trail is possible from Hamilton Branch State Park.

Turkey Creek Trail

Trail at a Glance -

TRAILHEAD: 33.79402, -82.14576 (Key Bridge)
SURFACE: Natural, narrow singletrack optimized for mountain biking
FEES: None
PETS PERMITTED: Yes
RESTROOMS: None

Starting off in a deeply shaded forest on narrow singletrack that slips through lush greenery, the Turkey Creek Trail provides a great round-trip destination for mountain bikers to put on some speed. Switchbacks, roots, creekside rocks, and logs provide some technical challenges but for the most part, it’s an easy, mostly flat ride. Bridges provide crossings of the tributaries that flow into Turkey Creek, including one of the longest wooden bridges in the region. Access to the trail is possible from Hamilton Branch State Park.

Wine Creek Trail

Trail at a Glance -
LENGTH: 5.5 miles linear
DIFFICULTY: Moderate
TRAILHEAD: 33.84130, -82.13294 (SC 283), 33.79402, -82.14576 (Key Bridge)
SURFACE: Natural, optimized for mountain biking

PETS PERMITTED: Yes
RESTROOMS: None

Following the gentle flow of Wine Creek as it winds its way for 5.5 miles through deciduous forests and around pine plantations to feed its waters into Turkey Creek, the Wine Creek Trail provides a shady and scenic ride for mountain bikers and a beautiful walk for hikers, with very little in the way of steep climbs. Several creek crossings mean some rock-hopping. Access to the trail is possible from Hamilton Branch State Park.
A walk or ride along the Ten Governors Trail ensures your acquaintance with all ten of Edgefield’s favorite sons. It’s a pleasant two-mile round-trip to walk from the start of this trail—adjoining the memorial to Strom Thurmond—to its end in downtown Edgefield at Main Street and back again. The trail starts out as a boardwalk over Slade Lake and then becomes a paved path that curves past historic homes and gubernatorial memorials that paint a picture of public service across three centuries.

1-866/345-PARK (7275)
The Cambridge Gateway Trail is designed for use by pedestrians and bicycles. The trail meanders past oak trees and through a bower of crape myrtles.

Town of Cross Hill offers a paved walking path. The trail is looped on both ends with a bridge connecting the loops. There are also benches along the way for users to take a break and enjoy the scenery on a nice day.

This short eighth-mile long trail was built on a former railroad track. It runs from the intersection of Reynolds Street and Grace Street to East Cambridge Ave. between backyards of houses and businesses. It is a convenient connector between town and Lander University for nearby residents and students. Another entrance to the trail is at Blake Street.

Ever wonder what life was like before the cell phone? Where a remote was a location far away from it all and a tweet was something you heard from a bird. The Old 96 District is off the beaten path and we’re proud of it. Affordable accommodations? You bet. Scenic? You got it. We’re home to South Carolina’s Unexpected Wonders—a series of pristine lakes that stretch for over 60 miles. We welcome visits from outdoorsy people like you.
